Institute of South-South Cooperation and Development

On September 26, 2015, during the High-Level Roundtable on South-South Cooperation on the sidelines of the 70th Anniversary Celebration of the United Nations, President Xi Jinping announced that China would set up the Institute of South-South Cooperation and Development (ISSCAD).

Thanks to strong support from the Ministry of Commerce, the Ministry of Education and the Ministry of Finance, and in virtue of Peking University's strong humanities faculty, profound historical heritage and comprehensive strengths, ISSCAD has been set up in the National School of Development of the university. ISSCAD is not only a high-level degree program focused on national development, but also a think tank committed to governance, international cooperation and exchange, and national policy research. It aims to review and share the successful experience of China and other developing countries; to build a teaching and research system of national development by integrating theory and practice; to cultivate high-level talent equipped with comprehensive theoretical knowledge, a broad international vision and open mindedness, talent capable of working for national development and making decisions in light of national conditions for developing countries. All of this is aimed at contributing to the economic and social development of the world as well as the solidarity, cooperation and common development among developing countries.

ISSCAD provides both degree education and non-degree executive training programs for mid-level to senior officials, as well as managers and researchers from government, academia, the media, NGOs and other organizations in developing countries.

ISSCAD has established a top-level faculty team consisting of prominent professors and leading practitioners in relevant fields from both within and outside of PKU. A carefully designed curriculum will enable ISSCAD to deliver knowledge and skills in all key areas related to national development, such as political philosophy, national governance, economic development, quantitative analysis and global leadership. A series of lectures and workshops will also be arranged to address engaging issues such as national development models, foreign policy, legal systems, and market economy systems to help students understand China and global trends. Through intellectual and practical studies at ISSCAD, students will learn general principles behind a country's development, and search for development strategies suitable for their own countries.

Chinese Government Scholarships Provided by the Ministry of Commerce

The Ministry of Commerce of the People's Republic of China finances ISSCAD's programs through the Chinese government's funds for foreign aid. Students admitted to the programs will receive scholarships to cover their tuition and basic living expenses.

Peking University

Peking University is the leading university in China. Founded in 1898, it was the first comprehensive national university in the country. Peking University upholds a spirit of academic freedom and inclusiveness. It has been home to a number of reputed experts and scholars in modern and contemporary China. Owing to its abundant teaching resources and outstanding research infrastructure, Peking University has been leading the other universities in conventional education in basic sciences, and has made great progress and breakthroughs in applied sciences and advanced interdisciplinary studies. Peking University has five principal academic branches: humanities, social sciences, natural sciences, information and engineering, and medical sciences. It has 53 colleges and departments, offering 120 undergraduate programs, 242 postgraduate programs, and 212 doctoral programs.

National School of Development

National School of Development

The National School of Development was founded in 2008, on the basis of its predecessor, the China Center for Economic Research (CCER). It is a multidisciplinary school providing teaching, research and policy advice, with a focus on comprehensive social studies.

NSD provides education across a number of sectors and disciplines, including economics, management, and governance, and cultivates talent at various levels required for national development, ranging from undergraduates, postgraduates and PhD to executive training programs.

NSD has a large number of both domestically and internationally renowned scholars, represented by Professor Justin Yifu Lin, Professor Qiren Zhou, Professor Weiying Zhang, Professor Yang Yao, Professor Yiping Huang, Professor Guoqing Song, Professor Feng Lu and Professor Jun Fu, who have long been committed to the study of development practices in China.

NSD is internationally renowned for having given close attention to China's development and reform, organized broad cross-disciplinary study, raised visionary issues related to strategies, institutions, policies and fundamental theories of development, and striven to become one of China's leading think tanks.

I Program Description

Prospective Students:

Our prospective students are mid-to-senior level officials or managers from government, academic institutions, the media, NGOs, and other sectors in developing countries, who have demonstrated superior performance, both academically and in their work.

Program Objective:

To prepare talent for the governance of developing countries.

Enrollment Plans:

In 2016, we plan to enroll up to 10 students in our doctoral degree program in Theoretical Economics (National Development) and up to 30 students in our master's degree program in Public Administration (National Development).

II Education Plan

Our master's degree program is a one-year full-time program. Students enrolled in this program are expected to complete the coursework, conduct research, and write a thesis within one year.

Our doctoral program is a three-year program. Students enrolled in the doctoral program are required to complete all the coursework and field study trips during the first year, and are expected to conduct research and write a doctoral dissertation in the following two years. In the last semester, students shall complete the dissertation and pass the oral defense.

Language of instruction: While all non-Chinese speaking students are required to take one Chinese language course, the language of instruction of the program is English.

1) Orientation

Before formal coursework starts, admitted students are required to take a one-week orientation session in China. The orientation session, led by prominent scholars and senior government officials, serves as a general introduction to China, focusing on China's development model, concept and path. Specific topics may include China's opening-up and reform, foreign policy, the legal system, the economic system, political institutions and national governance.

2) Formal Coursework

Our formal coursework has three modules: State and Development, Economic Development—Theory and Practice, Leadership and Methodology. A schematic layout of the three modules follows:

Module 1:
State and Development

Course Title	Instructor's Name
The Role of State in Economic Development	Jun FU
Political Institutions: A Comparative Approach	Tianyang XI
Contending Ideas of Political Philosophy	Qiang LI
Contemporary China: A Political Economy Analysis	Yang YAO

Module 2:
Economic Development:
Theory and Practice

Course Title	Instructor's Name
New Structural Economics and Policy Designs	Justin Yifu LIN
Development Theory and Policy	Xiaobo ZHANG
Economic Development under Globalization	Yiping HUANG
Politics of International Economic Relations	Daojiong ZHA

Module 3:
Leadership and Methodology

Course Title	Instructor's Name
Statistics in Social Science Research	Yan SHEN
Economic Policy - Microeconomic Analysis	Zhaofeng XUE
Economic Policy - Macroeconomic Analysis	Feng LU
Leadership in Global Perspective	Zhuang YANG
Project Management	TBD

Courses could be further divided into compulsory courses and optional courses. Classes will incorporate a mix of lectures, seminars, case discussion, tutorials, and presentations.

3) Field Study

Field trips will be arranged for students to Chinese special economic zones, industrial clusters, government agencies, and business corporations, to gain first-hand knowledge of how governments and markets operate under various changing conditions in the reform and opening-up process of China, and to learn about China's success and lessons in economic development.

4) Independent Research

Students are required to come to ISSCAD with practical problems to be addressed for the political, economic or social development of the student's home country. Guided by a supervisor, a student is expected to carry out independent research on China's successful practices and experience, find out the functioning mechanisms that drive a country's growth and search for development strategies suitable for his/her own country.

5) Thesis and Dissertation

The thesis or dissertation shall be written in English, and under the guidance of a supervisor.

The thesis or dissertation shall make an attempt to tackle a major issue emerging from the development practices of the student's home country. Students are expected to apply the theories, knowledge and analytical skills acquired from the program to examine the phenomena, analyze inherent principles, and finally produce a quality paper with meaningful academic and practical implications.

Master's thesis: By the end of the first semester, a student shall choose a professor as his/her supervisor, and determine the subject matter of the thesis. In the second semester, students are expected to complete their thesis and pass an oral defense.

Doctoral dissertation: A student chooses a professor as his/her advisor in the first semester, and determines the subject matter in the second semester. They are expected to collect data, conduct research, and write the dissertation in the third to fifth semesters. In the sixth semester, they shall return to Peking University to finalize and defend their dissertation. A doctoral dissertation must pass high standards, and will be evaluated on the basis of its originality, academic contribution, and practical value.

6) Degrees

The Master of Public Administration degree will be conferred upon a candidate in the master's program after his/her successful completion of the required credits and a thesis; a Doctoral degree in Theoretical Economics will be conferred upon a candidate in the doctoral program after his/her successful completion of the program.
