The Gastech Governing Body is made up of a senior, select group of industry professionals, representing the full global gas & LNG supply chains – commercially as well as technically. The heritage of some members goes back 40 years and Gastech is proud that its conference is developed and run purely by the industry, for the industry. With no political agenda or obligation to any over-arching organisations, they are free to advise and select the very best possible content for the conference agenda.

Members of Gastech’s Governing Body drive each edition’s conference programme from the session themes, to the plenary speakers, concluding with the papers voted on and selected for the final programme. The process is completely democratic and members vote on chosen themes and on conference papers, which then either make it through to final selection or are rejected (or considered for other presentation opportunities). It is a prestigious and critical role as the votes and decisions made determine the full outcome of each edition’s conference agenda.

Members also help the organising team seek out and encourage the very best papers to be submitted by the global gas & LNG industries, reaching out to their networks and ensuring a well-balanced and highly-representative programme is delivered.

A HISTORY OF Gastech

It has been 43 years since Gastech began and its story is one of growth year on year, mirroring that of the industry it serves. The very first Gastech was known as the S&SR LNG & LPG Meeting and, like all the shows until 1994, was organised by its creator, Brian Singleton. In 1974 the first event to bear the Gastech title was held under the umbrella of the Europort show in The Netherlands - the rest, as they say, is history!
